Inside Out

intro

An 11-year-old girl wrestles with the bickering emotions inside her head. It sounds like a therapy session. Instead, this movie created by Pixar is another amazing movie, an unmissable film triumph. Oh, did I say it was funny? It is, incredibly so, when you're not brushing away a tear.

Facts about movie

Inside Out is the 15th movie produced by Pixar and this may be their best yet! The voices of the main characters are voiced by some famous actors, all doing great work. They include Kaitlyn Dias voicing Riley, the little girl, and Kyle MacLachlan and Diane Lane as her mom and dad. The emotions inside Riley's head are voiced by famous Saturday Night Live comedian Amy Poehler (as Joy) and Mindy Kaling (disgust), Bill Hader (as a comically hyper Fear) and Lewis Black as Anger. The movie is 95 minutes long and is rated PG. It won the Academy Award Oscar for Best Animated Movie back in 2015 and it made more than $175 million at the box office!

What it's about without giving away the ending

In the movie, Riley is upset that her dad and mom have moved her to San Francisco from bright, snowy Minnesota, where she loved playing hockey with her BFFs. It's a scary new school and no friends, except for her emotion.: Inside in her mind, Joy is on a trip with Sadness (voiced by Phyllis Smith) to recover Riley's best memories. That leaves, Disgust and Anger in charge over of Riley's head. Which causes a lot of trouble! .

Why it's good and a conclusion

Sure this idea has been tried before — remember TV's Herman's Head? — but never with the artful brilliance of filmmaker Pete Docter. Docter gets into our control centers as well as Riley's and it made me cry at least three times as you really feel how Riley must feel inside her head. The movie is also extremely funny, perhaps at its best when we meet Riley's old make-believe friend Bing Bong who Riley no longer talks to. Bing Bong is a source of sadness and great humor as he saves the day with his Rocket Car. This movie makes you laugh, makes you cry. Go see it as soon as you can!
